Sehen Sie, wenn die Angst in die Seele heraufzieht, dann hält sie die Dinge in den Gedärmen nicht mehr zusammen; wenn die Angst aber unten in den Gedärmen ist, hält sie den Stoff zusammen.

R. Steiner, GA 350, 18. Juli 1923

The human being – like the animal – has fear built-in somewhere. It dwells in our big toe, the legs, the abdomen, everywhere in the physical structures fear is to be found. But it doesn't rise above the level of the diaphragm, except in worrying dreams. Yes, there is indeed fear – but it serves a beneficial purpose: it keeps the physical structure in place. Looking at the bones is where you will find the most pronounced stronghold of fear. The density of our bones is guaranteed by strong, built-in fear.

If fear rises in the soul, this fear is not able to structure the contents of the intestines anymore and one will experience problems like diarrhoea. As long as fear is confined to the intestines, then the waste matter will be formed.

Einer Tochter

Behaupte dich, sonst gedeihst du nimmer.
Es gilt Ich gegen Ich überall und immer.

Nur die Kräftigen
schauen die Höhn-
Was weinst du denn?
Ist das nicht schön?
